New order from a European army

Villepinte, November 22, 2018

DRONE VOLT, a French aeronautics manufacturer specializing in professional civilian drones, has received a new order from an army in Northern Europe.

This order is for a HERCULES 10 drone equipped with a quick release system and represents an additional order from a customer that had already purchased two ALTURA ZENITH systems equipped with a PENSAR intelligent camera (high value-added products developed by the group's AERIALTRONICS subsidiary) last July.

Following the signing of a framework agreement with the French army in 2018, two other European armies have placed their trust in DRONE VOLT's technology. These initial orders constitute a pilot equipment phase that could lead to increasingly substantial order volumes.

"Major government agencies worldwide, in the same manner as major industrial groups, have certified our robust drones and the artificial intelligence integrated into our software and cameras developed by AERIALTRONICS. Over the last few months, "pilot" orders have been delivered at a rhythm two times greater than last year and current discussions suggest an imminent increase in volumes that would enable us to attain our objective for profitability," indicated Olivier GUALDONI, the chairman / CEO of DRONE VOLT. "This demonstrates the pertinence of our heavy investments in R&D, currently estimated at 10 million euros (primarily recognized in expenses). These investments are now enabling us to benefit from high barriers to entry."
